2.1 BOILER

By definition, steam generator or a boiler is a closed pressure vessel in which water is heated by combustion and being converted into steam for heating purpose or as a mobile power source (Harry Jr. 1981). A boiler is also known as a tool to convert the chemical energy in the fuel to heat energy and from heat energy to potential energy available in the steam. In the modern world where power generation is an absolute must and a need to be produced at astronomical quantities, boiler becomes an important tool due to its capabilities to generate steam from relatively cheap and easily available entity, water. Steam is important for power generating facilities because it can be produced anywhere in the world as long as there are fuel as the heat source in the area because of steam is produced from water and it is non-toxic and also can be recycled from steam to water to steam again by the use of a condenser. Today boiler is engineered to used steam efficiently as well economically feasible. Boiler can be divided by two major type, fire tube boiler and water tube boiler. Boiler can be operated using two important elements, fuel and water.

A boiler is a closed vessel, which is made by metal, in which water is converted into steam by using the heat energy of fuel. It can generate steam at desire temperature, pressure and the heat generation rate.

According to the A.S.M.E. the boiler is define as " A combination of apparatus for producing, finishing and recovering heat together with the apparatus for the transferring the heat so made available for the fluid being heated and vaporized."

Boiler terms

- Shell: Consists of one or more steel plates bent into a cylindrical form and riveted or welded together. The shell ends are closed with end plates
- Setting: The primary function of setting is to confine heat to the boiler and form a passage for gases. It is made of brick work and may form the wall of the furnace and combustion chamber
- Grate: it is a platform in the furnace upon which fuel is burnt
- Furnace: it is the chamber formed by the space above the grate and below the boiler shell, in which combustion takes place.

Water space and steam space: the volume of the shell that is occupied by the water is termed as water space while the entire shell volume less the water and tubes is called steam space

- Mountings: The items which are used for safety of boiler are called mountings

- Accessories: The items which are used for increasing the boiler efficiency are called accessories

- Water level: The level at which water stands in the boiler is called water level

Refractory: insulation material used for lining combustion chamber
